Are Separate Schools Equal?

By Scarlett

I think separate schools are not equal because, some schools don't have enough money, there are unqualified teachers, and there can be too many students. I will explain myself later. If you listen carefully, you too will believe separate schools are not equal.

First of all, not enough money means not enough books. If you don't have enough money your school can't buy enough books. Not enough money leads to difficult things like, not enough books, not enough money, and unqualified teachers. It would lead to overcrowded classrooms, because if they don't have enough money they can't get new teachers so there would be more kids per class. That would also mean that they wouldn't be able to buy more classrooms for teachers to teach in. This will lead us to what I am about to explain in my next paragraph.

Unqualified teachers don't give the same education. Schools with not enough money probably means you are not going to have P.H.D. teachers. They are not as experienced and sometimes they don't know what they are talking about. If you want the same education, you want good qualified teachers. Your time at school wouldn't mean anything with teachers who don't know anymore than you do!!!

Last, more students means overcrowded classes. Over crowded classes can have not every individual person the education that they need. It also means that the money at your school isn't enough to get more teachers or classrooms. Which means that there are not enough classrooms at your school. Hopefully, we can change this for schools that don't have enough money to get the education that they need.

So now I conclude that overcrowded classes, unqualified teachers, and not enough money is not the way to go. I think that if people really want to do well they have to work for it. They can help out their school to raise money. They can also have fundraises and other things to be helpful to their school. I know that other people might not work as hard but I know that I want a good education and if my school didn't have enough money I would try my hardest to help my school. Hopefully people can help out their school and make it so that separate schools are equal.
