What Does Every Student Deserve?

What does every student deserve? One of the most important things that every student deserves is to speak and make their voices be heard. Make their voices be heard by everybody else, by all of the societies to let them express their ideas and make them feel that they are considered by everybody.

A student should be honored by the way people pay attention to their opinions. Sometimes a lot of students have some bright ideas but they get withdrawn because they think that their ideas are not or would not be accepted by other groups or other particular people. For instance, students might think that groups are formed only by super smart people or people in honors classes. The worst part of letting students know that all these groups and classes are for them too, is that they become aware of them just about when they are going to disintegrate or the school year is just about to finish. That is a very usual problem and also an example that shows that those voices have not been heard.

An important thing to do is to get students that don't feel like being in a club or any other activity. And also the students that already know that these groups are for them, is to make the club become strong enough to succeed and have a strong club in which all students would feel like the way they deserve to feel like. That way the student can realize that he or she is getting what he or she deserves and that's the way a student might like it.

I have a personal experience in which I experienced a lot of sad moments that made me get into classes and groups in which unfortunately were not successful because of their low interest in progress. I especially had a good friend who was trying to get into all of these different kinds of groups that were so successful and famous in which most of the members were seniors. My friend was just a junior and

www.TeachingtoChangeLA.org
my friend tried to get into this particular group, and she felt discriminated because she did not speak too much English but she could at least communicate with some other people and she got thrown out of the group because of her English. She thought that she was too stupid to be in a club. She even thought that she was too stupid to be in that particular group. She just thought about giving up. I was looking at her and suddenly she started to cry. She said that she was going to drop out of school and I told her not to. I asked her to think about it deeply and carefully. Now she is a junior and she is in honors classes and she is just doing well because of the help she got from school and some other students. The lesson in this particular experience might be that a student deserves to be helped and advised by a lot of people. It is better if that help comes from school, because that is a better place where students can come to know their worth not only in school, but also at home or other places where the student can succeed.

What a student needs or deserves is to be included in activities that helps them and that are used to put them into the right track. Because all of those things that students deserve are for good reasons that are equal in order to make them succeed. Sometimes the students don't take the help they are being offered because they think that they don't need it or because they just don't want to take that help. But the problem is that the people that have been offering that help, they just give up and they say, "He doesn't want to get help. Ok, someone else will." They should bug the student in all different ways so that the student would get interested in that particular way that the helpers have been trying to help that student or students.

In conclusion, what a student deserves is to be considered by what a student is. Put all the possibilities in practice so that the student or students get what they deserve because if these possibilities are not put in practice they will not be successful people. Students deserve to be the best persons in the whole country and why not in the whole world. And even though there are a lot of people who do not take what they have got, which is all the help they get from people from school or from home or friends or other kinds of sources, they are hard to get into the programs of help. They do not take it at all, then is when there is no solution, and there is nothing else for them to do. Then is when helpers might stop because a lost student is a lost student, and there is nothing else to do than let the student go. A student might deserve all the material gifts in the world but nothing compares to the fact of being someone in your life, like a complete professional.